HOW DOES CAFECONTROL WORKS?

It consists in two applications: One Server on one side and in the other side a client version. Server application is required to be installed at just one PC of the Local Network, remaining PCs require the client to be installed at each of them.

Client PCs are protected with an initial screen in order to avoid PC from being used without authorization.

Operator should assign PCs from his own workstation, this way when PC is assigned, protection screen disappears to permit usage. Each session is logged and such log can be exported to a text file.

License is flexible depending on local network growing requirements. One Cafecontrol server per each local network is required, if you need to establish “control points” with an independent log per each point then you may need one Cafecontrol server per each point.
